Our destiny should be better than today. Dr. King said that one day we should be equal and not be judged by our race. I think that means that even if somebody is black we should still treat them like humans and give them the chances we do. More black people are being shot because police officers they think they are reaching for a gun but really they are reaching for their wallet of their ID.

In my school I see a lot of fights with black people and white people. I think the fights happen because of people are being racist towards black people. I hear and see people being racist and that causes fights. In my school our destiny should be to have no fights, no racist people, and no judging.

We are treating black people like animals. That is unacceptable to do that to them. People need to be careful of what actions they take. They have feelings too. I think the meaning of Dr. Kings meaning of the message is to never judge a book by its cover. Or by their physical appearance.

We are all connected because we are people. We use the same stores, the same bathrooms, and most importantly, the world. If we do not unite and come together by communication. When people fight we might lose a friendship or even a live.

Martin Luther King Jr. says things that we can never forget and things that are true. He changed the way we see black people just a little bit. People still judge them and people still do not approve of them. White people threaten black people, they follow them in stores, and like I said they judge them because of their color. They think they are going to steal something or kill somebody. We are judging because we do not know what to do.

In conclusion, we should give chances and let the past go. But for some people that is hard. It is not hard for me. Do you see me going around following people in the stores, starting fights, or being racist? You should take my advice.
